

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 19

Issue 3 Fall

Article 25

1989

Three Foxes

George Shelton

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Shelton, George. "Three Foxes." The Iowa Review 19.3 (1989): 57-57. Web.

Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3802>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

and I was walking on the sidewalk,
the weight on my knees.
They hurt, I tell you.

THREE FOXES

Outside,
three foxes
and a cleverness you've never known in a secret wood with leaf mold
and desire in a long, horizontal nose,

yet a special intellectuality
lifts the breakfast egg from the pan, and you trust this.

You shower your body,
kicking the baby,
in the head, by the lamp,
brush your teeth,
stepping on your office mate's throat,
comb the hair,
aiming the car bingo
over a cliff.

Look into the mirror with a mouth full of pearls,
shaking the hand of this man you meet each day,
ask how he's doing,
and ignore him the rest of the long day.